DR. POTTER'S TROUBLES.

ANOTHER BITTER STATEMENT TO HIS CONGREGATION.

HE ACCUSES EX JUDGE HOWLAND, ONE OF JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER'S ATTORNEYS, OF TRYING TO INTIMIDATE HIS LAWYER.

The Rev. Dr. D. C. Potter, paster of the Baptist in the Welsh Church, Eleventh-st., near Third-ave., yesterday. The little church was crowdwith the members of Dr. Potter's congregation friends. After the regular services, Dr. ade the following statement from the pulthin a few days one of the most eminent and worthy laymen in our denomination has as-me that, after conversation with many men among our clergy and laity, our affairs y them debated and considered about as fol-

by them delated and collections;

And as a study in ethics it cannot be matched, and like to-regard it as a case of Eaptist ethics lustively, as I should dislike to lose all respective my denomination. This gentieman says, they the Tabe made, you, my people, are all very r people, and you did not give the money to ke the Talernacle property, you stand by Dr. ter and will centinue to do se; they say, you, he is our friend; we know him, love him, he is, and you will not surrender; therefore, rather w that we will take that property from them crush and scatter the church in order to desymin."

man after man says this is right. You he astonished if I gave you the names, reed for our property. They say we are now I beyond recovery, though they did the damereforc let us take the property. It is right to the property; they will waste it; it is too too expensive, for the few who are remain-

t us see about this. These gentiemen who are no our property did not give a penny toward it to the the property did not give a penny toward it to the the property did not give a penny toward it to the property did not waste it. The debts that accumulated not us were the direct result of the action of exalted personages who suddenly cut off the ges which were made for a year, and left us contracts running many months on hand the could not fulfil. But when my personal dis bought the personal property of the church, under judgment, they left it all with us. They royed nothing. We lost nothing. We lost nothing to the Baptists. We saved everything, but the Mission Society took advantage of the result he derelictions of its own founders, and the conditions they themselves created they used pretext to destroy us.

lad gospel and had sense. They will not succeed God, the infinite, is no respecter of strong persons. And the millions behind this movement will not help this unholy and malledous crusade. We are not an independent competing old refinery, neither are we a pipe line struggling for a way to the sea, to be destroyed in this way. The methods that are alleged to succeed in that business will not prevail in our affairs. We are an old and honored church of Christ, and our church property, saturated with the consecrated tears, the plous hopes, and still vecal with the prayers and sighs and songs of more than half a century of godly praise, will not be ruined by a covetous society, which hopes to take what it never created and to profit by the sacrifices of those who have had no voice nor part in their infaulty.

of those who have had no voice hor part in the infiguity.

You could not think that the honest men would reason as I have indicated, but I am solemnly assured that what I have stated is the logic of our brethren and our enemies. And they try very hard to defend it in the court of their own consciences.

THE CASES IN COURT.

Here is another and quite as interesting a mat ter. The other day ex-Judge Howland, one of Mr. Rockefeller's attorneys, stood up in the Su-preme Court and bemoaned that "we are called a deadly Upas tree," and in another part of the court he growled about those hurtful statements. I made to you and to the wide world last Sunday. He walled about trying cases in the public press and about painful publicity. Well, I have had to endure it for four long years. I don't wonder they don't like it. But it's the kind of medicine they have industriously, in season and out and on the smallest pretext, fed to me. Of course it is very nauseating, and now since these statements are facts, they are humiliating aud saddening indeed. Old Jacob Knapp used to say, "a hit bird always flutters." You shall be the judges of whether my characterization was strong or weak when I tell you that yesterday. I received a letter from my attorney, who appeared in my personal suit in the Supreme Court on Friday, in which he says: "After my appearance and statement to the Court, and your case was set down on the clerk's calendar for January 22. I met Judge Howland and he said to me: If you dare to bring this case to trial it will damage you in every way and from every direction that you can think of." Mr. Vanderpool replied that such threats did not alarm him, and he should proceed with the case. This is intimidation and a threat to prevent justice more damaging than anything yet done by this human god. We must suffer, but suffer in silence. If we dare appeal to the law, then beware.

During a few days to come we shall see if this kind of thing is to prevail in the courts of New-York, and if the vast money power that has grown so insolent and lawless shall succeed. I call you all, my devoted friends, to witness that if any ill or hurt shall come to me or mine, you shall trace it to one source, and to only one, and I ask you to demand through life and before all mankind that justice be done, in spite of Intimidations of post-tion or of wealth, and may God give us the strength to stand for our liberties, our rights, our church and each other. deadly Upas tree," and in another part of the church and each other.

ARRIVAL OF OVERDUE STEAMSHIPS.

The American Line steamship Paris and the Cunarder Lucania, which arrived here yesterday from Southampton and Liverpool respectively from twenty-four to thirty-six hours behind their usual time, were both delayed by wintry gales and heavy The Paris, on January 8, ran into a violent gale accompanied by driving snow. Last Thursday her chief engineer heard a rattling noise in the outboard easing of her port propeller shaft. The ship was stopped and a boat lowered for the engineers to make an investigation. It was discovered that a sheet-iron sleeve which protects the shaft from noisture within the casing between its outboard bearings had become loose. As the accident was trivial, the ship proceeded on her way. The slight damage will be repaired without placing the ship Lucania experienced the same kind of

The Lucania experienced the same kind of weather as the Paris, and on January 6 was compelled to heave to, so that she made only 122 knots in twenty-four hours. By a violent lurch of the ship last Tuesday afternoon, S. H. Kirkness, a cabin passenger, was thrown across the smoking-room and his chin cut and left arm bruised.

The French Line stemship La Champagne, from Havre, was sighted off Fire Island at 3:45 p. m. yesterday, and landed her passengers at her pler in this city last evening. She encountered strong westerly gales and heavy head seas throughout the pussage. Due allowance being made for unfavorable conditions of wind and waves, the ship made good time. Among her passengers were Señora Otero, Viscount P. de Tardy de Montravel and A. Ernest Vanderpoel.

VEDANTA PHILOSOPHY EXPLAINED.

PIEST OF A SERIES OF LECTURES BY THE SWAM! SARADANANDA.

Swami Vivekananda, the delegate from India to the Parliament of Religions in Chicago, who taught the principles of the Vedanta philosophy for two years in this city, recently returned to India, and is now succeeded by another teacher of the same faith, the Swami Saradananda. This new teacher delivered his first Sunday discourse in the New Century Hall, No. 509 Fifth-ave., yesterday morning on the general subject of the Vedanta philosophy. In India, he said, philosophy and religion are synonymous. All sciences were based of the direct experience of man, and the same rule applied to religious. Religion must satisfy the in-tellect as well as the heart. Vedanta meant the of the Hindoos, and Veda meant all the revealed knowledge that has come to mankind in the pas Bible and the Mahometan Koran came within this definition. The Vedanta philosophy was not built about one prophet or one man, but many men had had the superconscious experiences that are re-corded in the many short aphorisms which comprise the Vedas. The Vedanta philosophy taught the principles which underlie all the different religions. It regarded man not as he seems now, bu

the principles which underlie all the different religions. It regarded man not as he seems now, but as he really is, potentially divine, indestructible, not changeable. To call a man a sinner was regarded as blasphemous. By the different experiences of pleasure and pain man gained knowledge and expanded until he found his real nature, which is God.

"Through the imperfections of our faculities," the speaker went on, "we see the universe now as composed of many different manifestations. When we understand it correctly we shall see it is the Divine itself. The end and aim of the teaching in the Vedas is the perfection of man, the realization of his real nature. The truth thought by Jesus, 'I and my Father are one,' is the same as that taught in the Vedas. Our real nature within us is the absolute and not our body and mind. The Vedas divide men according to various characteristics into the philosophic or rational, emotional or loving, mystical and workers. Four different yogas, or methods, are presented by Vedanta to arrive at the realization of the real self, in the development of the faculities which preponderate in a person. Every man is a conduit for the Divine; only the removal of knorance is necessary. Our idea of God is our own mental image. Our view of the sun would change as we proceeded toward it, and when we arrived we should know the luminary as it is. So, as man grows, his vision of the Infinite enlarges.

"The Vedanta philosophy is not a sectarian religion. All religions are so many different ways leading to the same God. As all rivers, flowing through crooked or straight courses, reach the ocean, so all souls are moving toward God, the Infinite Ocean of knowledge and birs:"

The Swami Saradananda is about twenty-eight years old, a sanyasin, or teacher, who renounters all property and accepts no pay, He has the classic features characteristic of his countrymen, is above medium height, with fine shoulars and chest. He speaks English weit. There are free classes on Monday, Wednestay and Friday evenings

"In this highly colored imagery, so universal and familiar to the East, we have wrapped up in brilliant drapery a solemn, searching and practical truth, applicable to every age and condition of human life. That truth is that to every young man and young woman life is an enchanted hill. At the summit of this hill it is literally true that there is a treasure of incalculable value—there is the prize, 'incorruptible and undefined that passeth not away forever. It is literally true that the possession of that prize does bring life immortal, glorious and unending. It is true, also, that this great prize is given to whosoever will accept it under certain divine conditions, and, again, it is true that the whole pathway up the enchanted hill of life is besset with insidious dangers. Thousands of alluring voices, appealing to passion and sentument and emotion and pride, woo the climbers to turn aside or back, on the way to the summit. Tens of thousands of noble youths have listened to the voices, and, alast it is sadly true, last of all, that the whole hillside of human life is covered with pillars of stone images of dead men, dead women, immortally, spiritually and eternally dead. Up this enchanted hill of life every young man and women before me this evening is already climbing. That you man be warned of the dangers besetting you; that you may be admonished; that you may be encouraged, inspired and charged to press toward the summit, is the sole object of this closing sermon.

Dr. Young ended with an eloquent appeal to his "In this highly colored imagery, so universal

The last of a series of ten sermons to young people on "Toptes for the Times" was preached last night by the Rev. Dr. C. J. Young at the Church of the Puritans, One-hundred-and-thirtleth-st., near Fifth-ave. The course has embraced many interesting subjects, and the sermons have been listened to with the greatest interest by the older as well as the younger element of the congregation.

"The Enchanted Hill" was the subject chosen for last night's discourse. At the outset Dr. Young explained that from the wild fancies of Oriental literature a strange story had been handed down of an enchanted hill. Not only a treasure of incalculable vaine was to be found at the top of this hill, but life itself. It was provided, however, that those who sought to attain these should neither turn askide nor turn back, on pain of being turned into a pillar of stone. Countless number of brave youths attempted the ascent, but only a few succeeded, because of their weakness to withstand the temptation of the snares and allarements along their path.

Upon this story Dr. Young based a powerful sermon, in the course of which he said:

"In this highly colored limagery, so universal."
